

WANTON-LYMAN-HAZARD HOUSE

17 Broadway, Newport

Dating from the last years of the 17th century, this is Newport's oldest house and an excellent example of architectural transition from the 17th century to the 18th. The steep pitch of the roof and massive central chimney typify the former; the symmetrical five-bay facade and pedimented doorway hint at the formality of the latter. The house was damaged by Stamp Act riots in 1765, when it was occupied by a Tory stampmaster. It was purchased by the Newport Historical Society in 1927, was restored, and is now a historic house museum.
